NEW ARTESIAN AREA
IN COCHISE COUNTY

That the Sulphur Spring valley has an artesian area of some importance was stated recently by Professor G. E. P. Smith, professor of irrigation engineering at the University of Arizona. For many years small flows have been known to exist on the margins of the barren, alkali flat, and the belief has often been expressed that with better methods of drilling better flows would be developed. The artesian area lies southeast of the barren flat, reaching from the Three Sisters Buttes northward to the Hope ranch, a distance of about ten miles. The greatest width is about midway between these two points, where the width is between two and three miles. At present there are two good wells in this area, both belonging to Mr. L. B. Berry. The discharge at the first Berry well was measured by Professor Smith and found to be 73 gallons a minute. The artesian pressure was tested with a gauge and found to be 15½ pounds per square inch, which is equivalent to a head of thirty-six feet of water. The discharge from Mr. Berry's second well is said to be about 100 gallons a minute. The owner is entitled to credit for his enterprise in sinking these pioneer wells.

The origin of the artesian water is to be found in the surface flows from Bonita, Pinery, Fiveville and other creeks of the Chiricahua mountains. These streams after leaving the mountains sink below the valley floor. Through the center of the valley are great lenses of lacustrine clay, laid down in those past ages when a great lake existed in the valley. The strata of clay act as heavy blankets and keep the water underneath under great pressure. An analysis of the water levels shows that artesian water must exist on the southeast side of the flat alkaline playa, while a simple analysis on the west side shows that artesian water cannot be obtained in the vicinity of Servoss or Cochise. Flows can be obtained at any point on the margin of the playa, but in general the ground along the margin is too alkaline to be serviceable for agriculture.

It is timely to state that drilled wells in the artesian area should be of a large diameter, or at least the first hundred feet of the hole should be large, not less than twelve inches in diameter. Then, when the time comes that the artesian pressure is reduced by excessive draught upon it, pumps can be installed in the wells and the water supply thus continued. This has been the history of many artesian districts.

MORE PNEUMATIC
TIRES GOOD SIGN

"Our constantly increasing output of pneumatic truck tires is one of the signs of the efforts truck manufacturers are making to furnish the most efficient tire equipment with their goods," says H. T. Roseland, branch manager of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company.

"We are the pioneers in introducing a big pneumatic tire for trucks and have necessarily had to blaze our own trail. At first real selling effort was required to introduce these big pneumatics, but now that they have vindicated themselves, their sale has been greatly accelerated. The field for the tire is developing rapidly. Nearly every manufacturer in our country now honors specifications for our big pneumatics. Truck users and truck manufacturers are more and more coming to appreciate the value of extra cushioning in deadening vibration. Some have been seeking relief by the use of dual pneumatics, that is, two tires on each rear wheel. And now large fleets are mounted on single pneumatic equipment. The single tire obviously does away with the difficulty of maintaining equal air pressure in duals.

"Not only are these big tires proving their worth by providing greater cushioning and freedom from tire trouble, but they greatly reduce repair expense and increase the life of the truck. When we first introduced them their appeal was largely to truck owners hauling perishable or breakable goods, but so apparent have been their advantages that trucks in all classes of service are now using them.

"One field in which they have been significantly successful is that of equipment on sight-seeing cars. To retain their popularity these cars must furnish easy riding. And as they are run on a schedule the likelihood of puncture or other tire trouble must be eliminated. That this condition is fulfilled by our pneumatic truck tire is evidenced by the fact that a set of these tires, now in service, has traveled 23,000 miles without having been removed from the rims. Big mileages have come to be the rule rather than the exception.

The foremost tire engineers in the country have declared in favor of the single pneumatic tire for trucks, and some have predicted that within the next three years practically all ton and one-half ton trucks will leave the factory on pneumatic tires.

tected the girl. Friday and Saturday "Britton of the Seventh" by Cyrus Townsend Brady is the Lion offering. It is a preparedness picture, and shows the difference in the new and old way of fighting. The picture contains a wonderful scene in "Custer's Last Stand" with the Indians and the 14th cavalry now in Mexico hunting Villa are seen in action. "Britton of the Seventh" is a photoplay that will provide a fitting end to the best week's attractions ever offered at the Lion.

THE LAMARA THEATER opens the week with the first appearance of Virginia Pearson, the famed American beauty, in "Blazing Love" a William Fox production. This is Miss Pearson's first appearance as a William Fox star. When the woman who has been likened to Cleopatra first joined the Fox forces, leaving the Vitagraph to do so, it created almost a national sensation, for not only is Miss Pearson an actress of more than ordinary talent, but she is a writer as well and as a motion picture star she has a following throughout the country. Her beauty is of that wonderful order that made Cleopatra so famous in her day and time. So great is resemblance said to be that it goes beyond mere physical attributes. Miss Pearson is an authority on arts of the ancient world. She trains peacocks and loves exceptional animals, among which are many wonderful cats. Her love of wild colors has been a cause of wonder to her admirers. In "Blazing Love" she has a vehicle that gives her opportunity to show all the marvelous phases of her beauty, in all its splendor. The story deals with a woman who is married to a man her senior. She meets younger men and "Youth will be served." Her choice is a man her junior, and she tells her husband. He makes the supreme sacrifice for his beautiful wife, killing himself. Some years later, the difference between her and her then husband becomes noticeable. With all her arts she tries to win him away from a younger beauty but without success. After one terrific contest she admits defeat and does the same for her younger husband that her earlier spouse had years before done for her.

"The Dumb Girl of Portici" the greatest motion picture masterpiece the Universal Film Manufacturing company ever produced, is the picture in which the incomparable Anna Pavlova makes her debut on the motion picture screen at the Lamara on Tuesday, and reviewers who had the pleasure of witnessing an advance showing of this picture, are unanimous in their opinion that no person save the inimitable Pavlova could work in no little measure responsible for the great tribute paid the picture by almost every critic in the United States.

Four days Pavlova will entrance the Lamara, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week.

The picture which is to open today, "John Needham's Double" is said by the critics of every one of the trade papers to be one of the best products of the half year past. Two men, one a profligate of the worst type, the other a simple minded fellow, both looking so much alike that they cannot be told from the other, supplies the idea upon which "John Needham's Double" is built. Needham squanders the fortune of his ward, and when retribution seems about to overtake him, he entices the double to his rooms and poisons him. He impersonates the dead man and throws the blame on the supposed defaulter. Through the clever work of a girl he is unmasked and takes his own life when he finds escape impossible. The play is one big gripping effort and will be a relief from the surfeit of love stories and slum products for it is a play of life, not the make-shift sort that finds expression in so many of the plays of so-called grand passion origin. The story is so out of the usual and the chance good effective work on the art of the star so unprecedented that the picture has set a mark even in the meteoric career of the Blue Bird picture products which have mounted the very top rung by reason of the unguilted excellence. Tyrone Power, who is considered by many to be the greatest character actor with possibly one exception in the United States, will be seen in the part of John Needham. The difficult double part which falls to the lot of this great artist is said to have given him one of the finest chances of his long career and his son save the inimitable Pavlova could work in no little measure responsible for the great tribute paid the picture by almost every critic in the United States.
